A Merciless Judge

One Who Shows No Favor.

A merciless judge is Father Time. Before him the weak and the wanting go to the wall. Only the truth can stand. For years the following statement from a Norway resident has withstood this sternest of all tests.

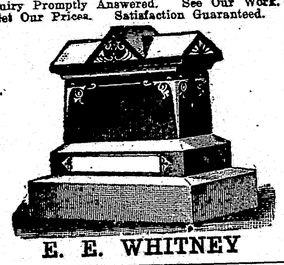

M. M. Kilgore, Danforth St., Norway, says: "I had backache and rheumatic pains for more than a year, caused by disordered kidneys. My kidneys were acting irregularly all the time and I was so lame and sore across the small of my back that I could hardly stand. At night I rested but little and was feeling miserable much of the time. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at F. P. Stone's Drug Store, and a few boxes cured me of the trouble." (Statement given July 24, 1908).

A Lasting Cure.

On June 7, 1916, Mr. Kilgore said: "I gladly give you my permission to continue using my recommendation as I am still a firm believer in Doan's Kidney Pills. The cure they gave me has proven permanent."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kilgore has twice recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. 35-36

What Causes Colds?
Some of the Usual Reasons
Cold in the head, cold in the chest, cold in the throat, or cold that settles in your back is all one and the same thing. Cold is congestion, often resulting from lowered vitality. Drafts, getting chilled, and being exposed to the weather will not give you a cold if your organs are active and healthy. But when your stomach is clogged with food, your liver sluggish, the bowels obstructed, or the circulation poor, then you take cold easily because the system is congested. To be free from colds, keep the stomach, liver, bowels and blood in good order with "L. F." Atwood's Medicine, an old family remedy that wards off colds when taken promptly, and protects against such attacks when used faithfully and regularly.
Buy a 35c bottle at your nearest store, or write to-day for free sample.

SUMMER DAYS.

I hear folks say with voices gruff,
"Of this hot weather I've had enough.
I'm tired now of mopping sweat.
This long hot spell I'll not forget.
"I cannot sleep day or night,
I have lost all my appetite.
I'm poorer now than any crow;
I long to see the summer go."
And in the orchard beneath the trees,
They go to catch the stirring breeze.
And on the street you hear folks say,
"Is it hot enough for you today?
"The grass has wilted, every blade,
Today 'tis ninety in the shade."
And so the folks they will complain
I wonder if their minds are sane.
But summer days will soon be gone,—
We shall miss the sunshine, bright and warm.
And winter soon will come, you know,
With its frosty nights and drifting snow.
'Tis then you'll dress in winter clothes
With icicles hanging on your nose,
And in a sleigh you'll sit and ride
Where winds come down the mountain side.
'Tis then your fingers ache with cold
Your reins you can no longer hold.
You meet a friend and he will say,
"Is it hot enough for you today?"
I'd rather hear the bees that hum
Or sit where sparkling waters run.
Winter time deserves much praise
But give to me the summer days.

AT THE TWILIGHT HOUR.

She sits by the window reading,
In the last red glow of the day;
When the sun, like some monarch's ruby,
Is vanishing swift away.
And her hands, that are worn with working,
Rest light on the printed page;
While her mind forgets want and sorrow
And toiling and care and age.
She sits by the window reading,
And the day that is almost done
Lights her face with a golden glory,
Sent down by the dying sun.
And her heart, that is tired, maybe,
And weary and worn with pain,
Responds to some writer's message,
Like a plant to the fragrant rain.
—Margaret E. Sangster, Jr., in the Christian Herald.

DON'T carry around a great amount of currency. If you do you are beset by two great evils. One is the temptation to spend readily. A man with $100 in currency in his pocket is freer to spend than the man with little currency. He is more apt to break a ten dollar bill than he is to draw a ten dollar check.

The other evil is the bait offered to thieves. A man who is known to carry a large sum of money in his possession never can tell when he will be set upon by a highwayman. The wealthiest men in the country seldom carry large amounts of cash. When you accumulate a goodly amount of currency deposit it in the bank at once.

THAT IS THE SAFEST PLACE FOR IT.

We pay 2 per cent. interest on check account of $500 and over, on even hundreds. Interest credited to your account last of every month.

The Secret of a Happy Home.

One thing above all else for which a girl should strive to-day, is to become a good homemaker and housekeeper.

She must not only become proficient in the art of dishwashing, cooking and housekeeping in general, but she must be able to teach others.

She must not only be able to teach others what she knows, but she must ever be a student herself. The world is progressing along these lines as well as other lines. There never was a time when it was so easy to keep one's self informed along all lines of progress in the art of housekeeping as it is now. The government at Washington will send out information along any kind of work scientifically.

The proper methods of cooking vegetables, meats, etc., the foods which are nutritious, those which are harmful, all such information can be had for the asking. Any one can learn how to do all kinds of work in the most improved and scientific way, simply by asking for the information. The benefit of years of study by the best scientists of the country can be ours. There is no excuse today for ignorance, if we will but make the effort to find out things.

Can a girl who is preparing to fill the position of wife and mother afford not to keep herself informed along all lines of scientific progress pertaining to the art of homemaking and housekeeping?

We never have really mastered anything ourselves until we can tell others Then, to be able to teach those younger and of less experience we must make ourselves proficient, for we sometimes have more opportunity to teach others than to do ourselves.

With the countless demands upon our time in this rapid age of ours, the young wife must prepare herself to delegate certain kinds of work to others, when her husband's income permits. When this work is not done properly by others, she must be competent to tell in a tactful, not a faultfinding way, just how it should be done.

Here is where many young wives as well as older women do irrevocable harm by saying, "Well, I do hope I'll never have to have any help" or "I shall be thankful when I am able to do all my work myself." Such utterances show women either too lazy to make an effort to train others in some domestic art or show themselvs absolutely selfish in wanting to shift all responsibility outside the home circle, onto the shoulders of others.

There is much to be done along the King's Highway and the woman who can afford to hire some work done, in order to be able to be more companionable to her family and of more service to the world at large, commits a crime in not so doing.

If a girl is going through life just to do the thing easiest and thinks only of her own happiness, she will receive her just reward—trouble and misery. She will be the first to complain because she thinks her husband does not love her as he once did. No woman makes this complaint unless she knows she is undeserving. How can a man continue to love a woman who cannot master the problems which are hers to solve? If she fail a dozen times, she does not prove herself a womanly woman by crying and complaining. She can keep on trying and set an example to the younger generation.

Suppose a man started out in the dry goods business and had to employ clerks, but after having had trouble with one or two, told his wife he had rather sell only what goods he could peddle in a cart than try to get along with help. Of course he could not do as big a business, but what would it matter if he were relieved of the effort of learning how to get along with help and how to replace the bad with good?

If women wake up and master these household problems and the help question, there will be no time for tears or foolish quandries as to whether or not their husbands love them. These are problems which women can solve without the ballot.

If the young girls of to-day grow up to be efficient housekeepers in every sense of the word, their husbands will have the companionship of wives who will cease to complain of their domestic troubles and will be rested enough to reach out a helping hand to the struggling humanity all about them.

When a young wife can afford to have assistance in her home, and has mastered so far as she can, the domestic problems so that she can turn over to others the work which they can do as well, she makes a grave mistake in not so doing.

When she can find time to offer to her husband a love and personality which leads her to love and serve others, and whose first and only thought is to give and not receive, then and then only can she deserve or find happiness.

When the young wife wants to say to her husband, "Come, let us go off by ourselves and be happy, away from all mankind just you and I," she had better stop and consider if it would not be better to say, "Come let us go out together and see whom we can cheer up, what good we can do for some forlorn person while there is yet time." Of course, there are times when two people can go off by themselves for pleasure seeking, but the greatest pleasure is derived from the love and service which we render to the needy.

We hear of many noble women who want to join hands with their husbands in making all the world in which they live happier and brighter by their examples of love and service.

It is ignorance which keeps mothers from teaching their children how much the world is asking of them to-day. We cannot sit back afraid of being contaminated by the evils that exist. We must plunge into the fray and thereby be of some service to those less fortunate. We must strive by example to bring others up to a higher level and strive ourselves to reach the heights above us.

Whenever we have time to be unhappy or think of our selfish selves, let us do something for someone else.

The people who have the real troubles in life are those who are most sympathetic, who smile the most and can love their enemies. Real trouble makes us have faith in God and man. We receive just as much love as we give to others. We ought to expect no more.

We can magnify our troubles by thinking about them, but we can never magnify other peoples' love for us by thinking of ourselves. In order to do their share along the King's Highway, we must teach our girls to master the art of homemaking and housekeeping, so to get as much time as possible for serving others. The homemaking, the wife and mother must do herself, but the housekeeping we can teach others less fortunate in worldly goods, to do, thereby helping them as well as ourselves.

BETTER FARMING AND BETTER FARM LIFE BY BUILDING UP RURAL COMMUNITIES.

"At the head of all the sciences and arts, at the head of civilization and progress, stands—not militarism, the science that kills, nor commerce, the science that accumulates wealth—but agriculture, the mother of all industry and the maintainer of human life."

That agriculture will be developed throughout the United States just as community centers are developed and that when the two are separated the fabric of rural life will be torn down, is the belief of Prof. G. I. Christie, superintendent agricultural extension work, of Purdue University, who, in talking before the convention of the National Fertilizer association recently, used the above statement regarding agriculture by President Garfield as his text.

"Do you think that we can develop the country districts of any state, if we destroy the rural towns? The rural towns grew up because the farmers wanted and needed stores where they could trade, where they could market their produce and buy supplies. The country storekeeper is there because they wanted him. Then they found they needed blacksmith shops, men to handle machinery—a center where they could get work done. It was the farmer himself who wanted the local center and he is the man that brought it here.

"We are convinced that there is enough information in our departments of agriculture and experiment stations if taken out and applied on the farms to double the production of this country, to make the land bloom like a rose, to give us the foodstuffs that will feed our increased millions of people in an adequate way. The county agent offers a medium through which this work can be accomplished," added Professor Christie. "It is readily seen that the educational field is large and that there is plenty for the county agents to do. Again, this work is directly helpful and profitable to all classes. Since county agents in most cases are supported, in part at least, by public taxation, they should exercise every care in the lines of work chosen, not to assist one class at the expense of another, providing they are engaged in legitimate business.

"In many counties there are people who would organize and use county agricultural advisers as financial agents for co-operative buying and selling. This is a questionable line for county agents to take up. Some of these people believe that the county agent is for the farmer alone. They forget that in most cases the county agent is financed by public taxation. It was the hope of the leaders of this movement that the county agent should work in communities with the farmers so that they may grow more corn, more wheat and more meat in order that the people in the cities shall get more foodstuffs at reasonable prices. They hope to help the farmers to make some money and to make life more livable.

"We say to the county agent if he is mixed up in the buying of fertilizers for the farmers of his county, "Purdue University cannot support you in this movement." We take this stand because we know that such work establishes a barrier between business men and the rural people. In this way is destroyed the great aim and object of the whole movement—to better cement and weld all people together in order that we may do things in a bigger and better way. We must also have the rural people see that they are making money, not to buy more land, to grow more corn to feed more hogs, to buy more land, to get into what they call the Illinois Circle and run it around seven times and then lay down and die and leave it behind them. They should get some land to grow more corn and feed more hogs, to get the money to build more roads and build better homes and have better life in the country. That is what we want and that is what the farmers must have."

RUMFORD.

Accidentally Killed.

During the shower Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 23rd, Maxwell Hayes was accidentally killed. He went to his room on the third floor for a book and was soon heard to fall. His mother immediately went upstairs, finding him on the floor with one arm badly burned and the electric bulb shattered.

Mrs. Roderick, who lives on the second floor, was thrown from her feet, but felt no bad effects and went at once to Mrs. Hayes' assistance. There was delay in securing a doctor and Mrs. Hayes ran to the McCarty Hospital for help.

Mrs. E. M. McCarty, who is a graduate nurse, and two nurses from the hospital hastened to the house and used artificial respiration. Physicians and a pulmotor were secured as soon as possible, but all means were of no avail. It is supposed that the room being dark, he went to turn on the light and received an electric shock, killing him instantly.

Maxwell was about 14 years old, the son of David E. Hayes, train despatcher for the Maine Central Railroad. He was a lad of fine physique, attractive personality, strong moral qualities and excellent mental ability.

JUST A MERE EXCUSE.

The word "fail" was expunged from the superdictionary known as the lexicon of youth by Edward Bulwer Lytton. It is time for another onymoclast to tear forever from men's books and from their minds the more sinister word, "opportunity."

A strange thing; it is never heard on the lips of successful men as an active force. With them it is something to be made, something merely passive, that is to be created in accordance with the high necessities of forceful life. But it is always spoken by those who have not made it with the sense that opportunity itself is the creator, makes or breaks man, directs the progress of the world.

We hear it to-day with an ironic touch when men say that opportunity no longer exists (forgetting that it never can "exist") because everything has been done. The irony is, to be sure, in the fact that this is the highest tribute to those who have made their good chance. Men walk about the streets to-day who could have invented the automobile. They are possessed of the strange conviction that the motor car was inevitable and that with their superior equipment and training they would have developed—if it hadn't been done already. But very few of them have taken the great gift of the motor car and done with it what Henry Ford has done. Not one of the men who would have done great things with the small motor did anything with it. Only the Wright brothers, who probably felt a deep humility before it, worked it into aeroplanes.

It is, of course, the "complexity" of modern life which leads those who cannot master it to say that all that the world needs has been given, all it can do has been done. But it is a far simpler matter to go from here to Pittsburg to-day than it was when Fort Duquesne was built. It is easier to illumine a city hall so that it stands like a tower of light than it was to light an English nobleman to a Halloween party in Shakespeare's time. The linkboy seems poetic now, but he was downright prosaic and quite ineffective three centuries ago. And this is pertinent because the growing simplicity of modern life has created so many necessities that men need only open their eyes to see what must and can be done. It is still necessary to create opportunity, but the materials are closer to hand.

We look out on a world to-day more varied, more colorful, more rich than it has been for years, perhaps since the Renaissance. A century of comparative peace has developed commerce and science, and with them a new attitude toward life. The century ends in bloody warfare, and the world, aghast, stops to consider its hundred years and to wonder whether they have been good. So art and philosophy return. But the winnings of the century cannot be again bled away on the battlefield. The restoration of the world will call into play every factor, will make requisition for every stout heart and every fine brain, will ask chemistry and poetry to join with sociology and sculpture in making the world whole again.

There are the materials of opportunity, but opportunity itself is not the golden word. If there is an incantation in words, an "open sesame," it must be in something as simple and as inherent in nature as sesame itself. And it is. The golden word is "Will." That, too, is a word dangerous to use, but it is safer than opportunity because it is part of each man's composition. For many years, since the worship of the will has become prevalent, the idea has obtained that all men possess it equally, which is no more and no less true than that men possess legs equally. Will exists, but it can be developed, and just as the weaker legs will lose in a race, the weaker will is destined to lose. To dominate the will to develope it, to feel it conquering, or at least to feel the swift rush of its strength in battle with an adversary, that, and not the taking of opportunities ready made, is the joy and the zest of life.—Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

BEWARE OF RED HUMPS.

Annie Hazelton of Waterford sent a bottle containing some caterpillars into the Advertiser office recently with the query "What are these?" Prof. Geo. Yeaton told us that they were Red Hump caterpillars and very destructive of young fruit bearing trees, stripping the leaves all except the mid-rib.

This sets back the fruiting of the trees a whole year and people having young fruit trees would do well to examine them for signs of the pest and destroy them.

They are more numerous this year than in the past few years as they have temporarily overcome the parasite which lives on them and kills them off. In a few years the parasite will predominate and the caterpillar will then be nearly extinct again. The Cuckoo and Wilson Thrush are the birds which destroy the greatest number of these caterpillars. About every ten years these caterpillars appear in abundance in different localities.

They are about three-quarters of an inch long, are of a brownish color with a red hump on the back and their head resembles red sealing wax. They do not have the fuzzy hair that characterizes most caterpillars but have only a few black stiff bristles along the back.

Hatchery Owned by State.

The Lake Auburn hatchery property is now owned by the State. Negotiations for the transfer of this property to the State by the Lake Auburn Fish Protective association began when the lease to the hatchery, which the State had held for 20 years, expired in November, 1915. Announcement of the result of these negotiations has just been made. This transfer is an epoch in the sporting history of this section of the State. In 1891 the Lake Auburn Fish Protective association was chartered and the hatchery became a great factor in the stocking of Lake Auburn with game fish. In 1895 the property was leased to the State for a period of 20 years and under the State's management the hatchery became one of the most successful in the State.

Build a Home

Having been requested by many of the business men of our town to erect homes, which at this time are so much needed, we have worked out a plan somewhat similar to Building and Loan Associations, which will enable anyone with a little cash to own a home of their own, paying for it in easy monthly installments.

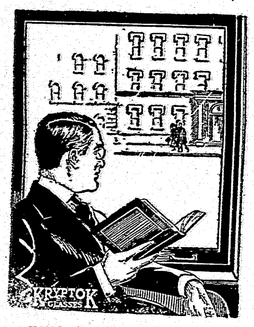

We have cuts of all kinds of residences, with estimates of cost which we will be pleased to show to those interested.

Select your location and style of house and we will give you the exact cost to you per month.

NORWAY AND VICINITY.

The Pleasures of a trip around the Mountains.

One of the most enthusiastic auto parties of the summer was made up of Mr. and Mrs. William Gerry, Mrs. Lucelia Merriam, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Frost, of Norway, and Mrs. Frost's cousin, Miss L. Ardell Kimball of Ipswich, Mass., who left town at 7.30 A. M. on Aug. 23d for a two days' trip through the White Mountains and Dixville Notch.

Little more than three hours of riding through Waterford, Harrison, Bridgton, Fryeburg, Conway, North Conway, Intervale, Bartlett, and Bemis, brought them to their first stopping place, the site of the famous Willey House, of which there is now no trace but the cellar stones. During the fatal land slide of Aug. 28, 1826, the house was spared because the slide parted just enough to leave it untouched among the ruin about it, but the frightened family, seeing evident peril, had run from it in terror and every member was lost. The immensity of the mountain opposite the site of the house cannot be described—it is almost suffocating. From here the ride was continued through Crawford Notch to the beautiful memorial spring, which gushes from the hillside beyond the Crawford House. Here the travelers had their noon time lunch, and while the cool pure water and abundance of good food refreshed "the inner man," the eye was being equally refreshed by the wonderful view of the Presidential Range, where a tiny puff of black smoke told that the powerful engine of the Mount Washington Railway was carefully taking a freight of human life to the summit, and the ear was charmed by sweet chimes from the beautiful stone chapel across the road.

It is a law of life that often we must part with one good thing if we would gain another, so half reluctantly the members of the party gave farewell glances at the famous peaks and proceeded on their way past the White Mountain House, Mount Washington Hotel, Fabayan House, Ammonoosuc River and Twin Mountain House, into the beauties of the Franconia Notch.

The entire ride is dotted with booths and shops where most attractive balsam pillows, sweet grass treasures, and beautiful post cards are offered for sale, and at one of these the writer purchased a deliciously fragrant fir pillow, but advises the easily influented to leave the purse locked up at home, for there is something about the bewitching mountain air which is very relaxing to the purse-strings of such people.

The ride through Franconia Notch is one of the richest parts of the trip, and there the party would have been glad to linger to admire the unusual beauty of Echo Lake, but just at this point began an exhibition by a miniature mountain thunder shower—the "echo" of the severe one in this locality, perhaps—and they stopped in the vicinity of the Profile House until the interesting performance closed.

The next point of interest was the Profile—the famous "Old Man of the Mountain." The venerable old gentleman was looking well and apparently was much refreshed by his recent "shower" bath. The writer has decided that personal vanity cannot be a strictly feminine quality, since this rough featured "Old Man" has spent ages, doing nothing but look into one of Nature's most perfect mirrors—the beautiful Profile Lake, hundreds of feet below his mountain home.

Some distance beyond here the picturesque Basin was admired, and the ride through the Notch ended at the entrance to the three-fourths of a mile walk to the Flume, which is a long, deep fissure down a rocky hillside, and at the extreme upper end a delicate mountain cascade leaps with joyous laughter and anticipation from rock to rock, then as a mountain stream slides merrily down the gradual incline of the granite bed of the chasm, and hurries away to meet its fellow rivulets on their journey to the sea. Although in the open places the sun's rays were burning hot, the rocky sides of the Flume were dripping with moisture, and dainty with a green mossy growth.

Even here the temptation to linger had to be overcome, and after retracing the Franconia Notch road, the party continued on through Bethlehem, Maplewood, Whitefield, Lancaster, Groveton, Stratford, Columbia, and Colebrook, N. H., arriving at the Monadnock House about 7.30 P. M.

The homeward trip commenced at 8 A. M. the next day, through scenery scarcely less inspiring than that of the day before, for the road wound through the splendid mountains of Dixville, N. H. and the beautiful possessions of The Balsams, to the wonderful "pass" in the ledge just beyond the Balsam Hotel. There the party stopped to get a good view of a remarkable likeness to Martha Washington, which stands clear cut against the sky, at the top of the ledge. When Mother Nature pleases to be, she is a good sculptress.

The remainder of the trip lay through Errol and Cambridge, N. H., by the shores of Lake Umbagog, and into Upton and Grafton, Maine, where a picnic dinner was eaten at Screw Auger Falls, then onward past Saddle Back Mountain into Newry, Bethel, Greenwood and Norway, until at 2.30 P. M. the delighted party had completed its 260 mile ride, and found itself amid the practical and promising scenery of Upper Main Street—"road under construction," etc.

The trip was taken with Donald Andrews in his Cadillac car, and all the members of the party declare themselves to be well pleased with the comfort of the car and the carefulness and skilfulness of the driver, and anticipate the pleasure of taking a similar trip with both, another year.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Ring of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Swain and Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Cummings and "Laddie" returned recently from an automobile trip to the Bald Mountain camps. They went by way of Rumford, Weld, Philips, Farmington, Rangeley, Flagstaff, Eustis and up the Dead River, fishing along the way and visiting places of interest.

Mildred and Louise Collins of Framingham, Mass., who have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. Chas. G. Blake, have returned home.

E. B. Jackson, wife and son, accompanied by Mrs. Alice Marston motored to Bethel and vicinity, Sunday.

Mrs. Nathan Merrill of Creescent street, recently received word of the drowning of her sister, Mrs. Elias Morse of Livermore. Mrs. Merrill left immediately by auto, Mr. Merrill leaving upon the arrival of another sister from Massachusetts.

Frank Callahan and family have returned to their home in Boston.

"MAINE."

Throughtout all seasons of the year,—
Winter, spring, summer or fall,
There is always a charm in thee
That gives us our freedom's call;
Through the city and the country
Ev'ry man is someone's friend,
And may we be true to our state
Until our life's very end.

Chorus

When we're getting old and blinded
And our lives are on the wane,
May we not know thoughts unloyal
From the good old state of Maine.
Round the forests and sparkling lakes
The small birds with freedom sang,
But not a murmur unloyal
In our woodland ever rang;
Through these forests our fathers trod,
Trying to brighten our way,
Yet through the mists of many years
I can almost hear them say:

Chorus

Over our heads float the symbol
Of our country's strength and love,
May it never drag in the dust
Though it takes our souls above;
Our ancesters have fought for it,
And for us they'd fight again
Beneath the folds of old Glory
Waving high and free, from Maine.

Chorus

TAKING SUMMER BOARDERS.

Some years ago it was common for the farmers to take summer boarders from the cities. Farmers were not as well off then as now, and $10 a week for a couple of months from three or four people looked better than it would now.

It was a rather amusing meeting of different types of people. The city folks laughed at the country people, and the country people laughed at the city folks. The boarders lounged about the farm, showing at every turn their ignorance of practical country life. They were unable to tell the difference between hay and oats, or between a mowing machine and a horse rake. They enjoyed hugely the rusticity of their hosts, whose lack of sopristication furnished themes for conversation all winter.

At the same time people of substantial worth came to appreciate each other, even if their exepriences had been different. The country people were brightened up by their alert city visitors, and the city people found qualities of sturdy manhood and womanhood that do not grow in the unwholesome conditions of urban life.

Nowadays farmers are dealing with bigger items and see little profit in a few boarders. Any apparent proceeds are eaten up by improvements and extras that they call for. The business has gone mostly into the hands of small boarding houses often kept by women who make a specialty of this work.

The drift of summer travel has also gone in other directions. A host of people who used to board during vacation now own little shacks and cottages and rent them. Others are tearing around on dusty motor tours. Still others prefer more lively resorts, where there is society and sports. It might be better for restless people if they were willing to settle in quiet country homes as they used to do.

Love Makes Home the Happiest Spot.

Home should be the happiest, brightest, cheeriest spot on earth. As life is what we make it, so also is home what we make it. The peaceful, happy home in some sequestered spot, is love's abiding place.

It may be but a tiny shack in a mining district, or a stately mansion in a large city. What makes the real home, the happy home, the true home?

A man and wife who love each other, who speak out to one another and to the the world and are just what they seem; who keep their hands and hearts clean and give to the world the best they have, knowing the best will come back to them; who scorn to harbor a revengeful thought; who have their convictions without malice and who are big and brave enough to forgive and forget when this is necessary.

Sometimes, of course, one may err, then cannot the other overlook it, or, if it is a real fault, help to overcome it? Blot out as far as possible the disagreeable things in life; these will come, but they grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of acts of meanness, or worse still, malice, will only make us more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday, start out with a clean page for to-day and write upon it for sweet memory's sake, only those things which are lovely and lovable.

Think that the loved one whose hand you touch, whose voice you hear and into whose eyes you look with so much confidence to-day may by tomorrow be gone past your touch, out of your sight and remembrance; marvel that those of one household could ever be unkind to one another. Life is too uncertain, too full of risks and there are too many possible heartaches for even the most fortunate to make it safe for loved ones to part in anger. Though the parting is but for a day, let it be in peace and love.

The husband and wife who have fared onward through life from youth to old age together have so many associations, so much tangible wealth in common that gold cannot buy, that their love is greater than when they pledged it at the altar. Sorrow, too, brings dear hearts into more intimate companionship, though at the time we may not see it.—Express.

CLEAR OUT THE RATS

It is a remarkable fact, confirmed by many observations, that many physicians who have devoted considerable labor to the study of a particular disease have themselves died of that disease. One of the most interesting examples is that of John Daniel Major, born August 16, 1634 in Breslau, a physician and naturalist of no mean ability. Bitten early by the wanderlust, he studied at Wittenburg, took courses at many of the schools in Germany, and finally went to Italy where he received the degree of doctor of medicine at Padua in 1660. Returning to his own country, he resided for a short time in Silesia, and in 1661 married at Wittenburg, Margaret Dorothy, a daughter of the celebrated Sennert. The following year, his young wife was stricken with plague and died after an illness of eight days. Distracted by his loss, Major wandered up and down Europe studying plague wherever he found it, in the hope that he might find a cure for the disease which had bereaved him. Spain, Germany, France and Russia were visited by him. He settled in 1665 in Kiel, where he was made professor of botany and the botanical director of the botanical gardens. He made frequent voyages, however, always in quest of the remedy for plague. Finally in 1693, he was called to Stockholm to treat the queen of Charles the Eleventh, then ill with the plague. But before he could render her any service, he contracted the disease and died on the third of August.

The bubonic plague of to-day is identical with the black death of the Middle Ages. Primarily a disease of rodents caused by a short dumb-bell shaped microscopic vegetable, the pest bacillus, it occurs in man in three forms; the pneumonic, which has a death rate of almost 100 per cent.; the septicaemic, which is nearly as fatal, and the bubonic in which even with the most modern methods of treatment the mortality is about 50 per cent. It is a disease of commerce, spreading around the globe in the body of the ship-borne rat. It is estimated that every case of human plague costs the municipality in which it occurs at least $7,500. This does not take into account the enormous loss due to disastrous quarantines and the commercial paralysis which the fear of the disease so frequently produces.

The disease is now treated by a serum discovered through the genius of Yersin. This is used in much the same way as is diphtheria antitoxin.

Plague is transferred from the sick rodent to the well man by fleas. The sick rat has enormous numbers of plague bacilli in its blood. The blood is taken by the flea which, leaving the sick rat, seeks refuge and sustenance on the body of a human being to whom it transfers the infection.

Since plague is a disease of rodents and since it is carried from sick rodents to well men by rodent fleas, safety from the disease lies in the exclusion of the rodents, not only exclusion from the habitation of man, but also from the ports and cities of the world. Those who dwell in rat-proof surroundings take no plague. Not only should man dwell in rat-proof surroundings, but he should also live in rat-free surroundings. The day is past when the rodent served a useful purpose as the unpaid city scavenger. Rats will not come where there is no food for them. Municipal cleanliness may be regarded as a partial insurance against plague. The prayer that no plague come nigh our dwelling is best answered, however, by rat-proofing the habitation of man. Modern sanitary science has evolved a simple and efficient weapon against the pestilence which walketh in darkness and striketh at noonday, and the U. S. Public Health Service has put this knowledge into practical operation and thus speedily eradicated plague wherever it has appeared in the United States.

PERSONAL VACATION NOTES AND MUSINGS

of Great Public Interest.
Printed to Amuse the Writer.

Meredith Center, N. H., August, 1916.

Some people grow old and don't know it, but their friends do. I'm getting that way and realize it hence, I'm different.

A little barefoot boy in overalls was trudging up the hill to get the cows. I was walking along with him and told him I used to go barefoot and get the cows from the same pasture the same as he was doing, when I was a boy. He surveyed me critically for an instant and replied, "That was a good many years ago."

It was true, and he sized me up correctly. This happened two years ago and the little boy has since died. I wonder what he'd think of me now should he see me wearily pushing myself up the hill with a cane?

The boy's name was Carroll Kimball, a son of Herman and Lill (Tuttle) Kimball of this place and a grandson of Warren and Eliza (Piper) Kimball, who own and cultivate the late E. S. Robinson farm.

Ebenezer Sullivan Robinson married my father's sister, Lucy Lowell Sanborn, and was known to me as Uncle Sullivan, and as he grew older he became Uucle Sull to the whole neighborhood.

It was on his white horse I took my first lessons riding bareback to cultivate between the rows of corn and occasionally he would jaw me for allowing the horse to step on a hill. I longed for a saddle when I rode in street parade, but a blanket strapped on his back had to do.

Many years after I did ride in a saddle from the muster field to the Augusta House and it took a squad of cavalry and Major Bial F. Bradbury to keep me in it. I made such a scandalous appearance I have never been in a saddle since, except on merry-go-round ponies at fairs.

I chased turkeys out of the grass and hunted hens' nests in the barn and really believed if I killed a frog the cows would give bloody milk. I was told so. One night I noticed when my grandmarm was milking her cow—she had one cow out of the drove all her own and cared for the milk and made cheese and butter—that the milk was streaked with blood and I knew Oran Carr, the hired man, had killed a frog that day in the field. He had cut the frog while mowing and stamped out its misery with the heel of the scythe. This, to my mind at that time, was conclusive proof that the truth had been told me.

It somehow lingers with me yet and seldom do I use frogs for bass bait without thinking of it and wondering if the cows will give bloody milk. I did not then understand about "gargety cows" and whether grandmarm used the milk she got that night I can't say, but presume she did.

She made excellent cheese and was liberal in giving me curd and press-pairings and the turning and greasing of them in the attic was a wonderful sight to my young eyes. I was never allowed to touch them and was made to understand the greasing was to keep the maggots out.

Farm cheese making, dash-churning, spinning and weaving has become a lost art. How many of my readers know what rennet is and where and how it is obtained? How many can make soft soap and a decent kettle of old fashioned corn porridge? You can buy "junket" at the store and it will curdle the milk the same as rennet in my early days.

I'm old and know it, but it plagues the Mrs. to hear me admit it. Anything I dislike is an old person trying to be young again. It's all right for an old dog to caper and frisk about for a little while in the morning, but you will soon see he finds a cool, shady nook and lies down and sleeps.

That is the way "Jack" does and he is in his eleventh year and I consider him as old as I am at sixty. The dog is filled with infirmities, so am I. He is restless nights after a day of extra exertion and his teeth are poor, and it is the same with me. It is with dignified contempt he views the playing of the young pups and growls and viciously snaps at them and this is about the way I feel toward the young folks.

I cheerfully make a correction: Last week I said a non-resident license for a 6-40 Hudson car was ten dollars. This was the way I figured it out from the booklet on motor vehicles, furnished by the State. I sent that amount of money and a few days after receiving the number plates, I got a refund of $2.50, hence the license is $7.50 and not $10.00.

Under the spell of a big silver moon, the man in which flirted desperately with every good-looking girl who dreamily gazed at him, and which shone down in magnificent gorgeousness upon the most beautiful body of water that human eye ever rested upon, was held Tuesday night, one of the happiest events of the season. —Gerry Gray in the Laconia (N. H.) Democrat.

Isn't that a sentence? Whoever heard its like? I haven't since the day of the late J. K. Chase and his "Sycamore Sall or Starry Eye's Revenge," published in this paper some years ago.

I can't keep my jack-knife sharp there are so many borrowing it. Have nearly ruined one of Will Leavitt's advertising carborundum whetstones in the attempt. Have now got the blades sharp and have become selfish and refuse to lend. Maybe I'll soon get smart enough to make canes and then I'll need it. I have here a half hundred canes waiting the finishing process for the market. I'm waiting for strength and have a knife as sharp as a razor.

The level from the barn floor to a shade tree strikes just where the first limbs grow out. Fifty years ago the level line struck in the same place. This shows that the tree trunk does not grow in height.

Eggs are 37 cents per dozen and new potatoes $1.00 per bushel. An Ideal Sewing Machine costs $24.00 and as there are several women in the house depending on using a neighbor's machine, I feel it would be well to buy one and keep the girls home at night. It's more useful than a piano and don't cost as much.

Everything is saved including tin cans and old bottles. The barn—my headquarters—is overrun with such colateral. Hammock, swing, croquet set, a cider mill and a 30 year old horse, more useless than I am. "Patsy," the horse, has been so good and faithful in days gone by no one has the heart to lay him away and permit the daises and grass to grow over him, so he is kept. Dr. Rob Smith, the veterinary, filed his teeth last week and it's expected he will become young again.

Apples, well, you should see them. Early harvest, Astrachans, Sweet Bows, etc. The wind falls are picked up in baskets and brought into the barn and set round and tempt me. I can't eat 'em. The younger set do until I should think they would break open. Some find their way into pies and sauce and here again they tempt me and I nibble them a little only to suffer. I'm pretty much done for anyhow.

Mother has all she can do in keeping "Jack" away from skunks. The woodchucks were drowned out during the wet spell last spring, but not so with the night-prowling gentlemen of strong odor. They are in evidence and the dog knows it and is anxious for battle.

The "Go-Devils" come up the hill and pass the house with a whew, making a streak of dust and a great noise. Why the riders are not killed I can't say. I sometimes think they ought to be for the good example it would set for other adventurous and fool motorcycle riders.

Walter is a good hand to drive a car and black boots. He has done both for me satisfactorilly. He tinkers with the carburator and says the engine goes better, but I fail to see any great difference. The engine pulls well all the time but Walter says it takes too much gasoline. He got little over five miles to the gallon at first and it rose to over seven and a half miles and the last test shows ten and four-fifths miles to the gallon. This shows what carburator tinkering and scientific engine adjustment will do. Walter hasn't told me that, but of course he expects I know enough to catch onto the fact without being told. Have been using 26 cent vidol oil and carrying eight in the car. Road conditions were about the same during the time.

I attended church and heard Rev. Eugene Dolloff preach. Eugene is a son of Fred Dolloff and a grandson of the late John S. Dolloff, who was Meredith's tax collector for many years when I was a boy and lived at home. Father was one of his bondsmen and was never called on by the town to make good any deficiency in Mr. Dolloff's accounts. Rev. Mr. Dolloff is pastor of the Baptist church at Newmarket, N. H. and supplies here while on his vacation. There were only a few at church and I recalled the days when Rev. Oliver Butler preached two sermons on Sunday and the house was well filled. I attended Sabbath School at the noon hour while men and women coming from a distance ate their luncheon at the end of a wagon and talked over farm conditions. This was before the day of the Grange. I own a pew in this church but I fail to find any evidence of the Parish Organization owning the meeting house. Nothing is on record relative to it in Belknap or Strafford County Registeries. It is just as well unless a gold mine or oil well is found under it.

I have a mark on the barn floor and the sun shows me when it is seven minutes past twelve, so I won't be late for dinner. No wrist-watch yet, thank you.

Bro. Shorey of the Bridgton News writes us he is planning on putting in a linotype and a pony cylinder and expresses the hope "he will never be silly enough to run as much reading matter as we do." I venture he won't do it, as he isn't as foolish as I am, even if he is a Grand Army man and a good editorial writer he has horse sense and some regard to the expense.

Hon. Cy Sulloway of Manchester called on me the other day. Of course he knew me. He is extending the glad hand to everybody in the First Congressional District. I'll wager a pipe of tobacco he gets the nomination.

Calves blat, hens crow and the girls whistle and I sit in my father's favorite cushioned chair writing to kill time.

I have put the quietis on the whistling, as it is fully as annoying to me as that that comes from Merton Kimball of Norway.

Any girl who whistles in my hearing will not be permitted to ride in the auto on that day.

That is the penalty.

Dr. H. L. Bartlett, wife and daughter Alice of Norway and County Commissioner, G. W. Walker and wife of Lovell rolled in on us at about 11 o'clock, Saturday, August 26th. They had come from Lovell that morning. Of course I was glad to see them and extended the right and left hand of fellowship immediately and insisted they stop to dinner. To this they demurred a bit, but a few words from the women folks urging them to remain set matters right and a three hours' visit was the result. I eagerly sought home news not found in the Advertiser and time passed quickly. I let them leave in season to make Haverhill, N. H. before dark that night if all went well. I fear they run into showers before getting there, however, I'm not responsible for that as I have no control over the weather.

Government Buys More Lands in Appalachian and White Mountain Regions.

The National Forest Reservation Commission has approved the purchase by the government of 59 tracts of land with a total of 66,880 acres in the Appalachian and White Mountains. Of this, 36,000 acres is in the so-called "Kilkenny Purchase Area" in New Hampshire. It is the policy of the Commission to build up Government holdings, as nearly solid as may be, through buying only in certain specified places, which are designated purchase areas.

The Kilkenny Purchase Area adjoins the so-called "White Mountain Purchase Area" on the north, and is on the watershed side of the Connecticut River. The land now approved for purchase is the first to be acquired in the Kilkenny Area. About 17,000 acres of land on the White Mountain Area was approved. This land lies for the most part on the west slope of the Carter Range and practically completes the Government purchases in the northern portion of the White Mountain region. With this land a total of 698,086 acres in the White Mountains has been acquired.

Congress recently reappropriated the $3,000,000 of the original fund which was not spent in the beginning of the work and which consequently reverted to the Treasury. This money, according to the officials in charge, will be used mostly to round out the lands already acquired, so that they may be easily and economically administered. In making future purchases it is stated that the policy will be to select those tracts which block in with lands already purchased and which are offered at the most reasonable prices.

The acquisition of lands was begun in 1911 under the so-called "Weeks Law," which permitted the Government to purchase, for National Forest purposes, lands on the headwaters of navigable streams in the White Mountain and Appalachian regions. To date 1,396,367 acres have been approved for purchase.

Needle Dust.

In factories where needles are made the grindstones throw off great quantities of minute steel particles, with which the air becomes heavily charged, although the dust is too fine to be perceptible to the eye. Breathing the dust shows no immediate effect, but gradually sets up irritation, usually ending in pulmonary consumption. Ineffective attempts were made to screen the air by gauze or linen guards for nose and mouth. At last the use of the magnet was suggested, and now masks of magnetized steel wire are worn by workmen and effectually remove the metal dust before the air is breathed.—London Graphic.

Raymond Robins at South Paris

Monday, Sept. 4.

The Grange Hall at South Paris will, no doubt, be packed to overflowing next Monday night to hear Mr. Raymond Robins, one of the country's most eminent men. It will be of interest to know that Mr. Robins started out as a poor boy in the South, working in the mines when most boys are attending grammar school, worked his way through college, became a lawyer in California, dug a modest fortune out of the Alaskan gold fields; later searched for the hardest and most needy place and found it in the 17th ward in Chicago, where some 80,000 people are piled on top one another in a square mile and there with his wife, devoted 15 years in Social Settlement work.

Mr. Robins was chairman in the Progressive Convention at Chicago, but is now campaigning for Candidate Hughes. Roosevelt says of him, "It has been my good fortune for three years to be thrown very closely with Mr. Robins. I respect him in the highest degree, he never uses a word which he does not translate into a deed."

Mr. Robins, for the Y. M. C. A., made a tour of the Eastern colleges and was a great favorite with the students everywhere. He has a virile message with a punch for the young man of to-day. Mr. Robins speaks only once in Maine and Oxford County will be greatly honored by his presence.

Hearing at the Courthouse.

A hearing was held at the court house Wednesday before Justice George M. Hanson of Calais. Two cases were heard concerned with the same set of facts in both of which Lillian M. Rowe was plaintiff, the defendant in one being the Norway National Bank, and in the other, Frank B. Fogg of South Paris. The question for determination was whether a check drawn by the plaintiff to the order of Mr. Fogg was for two dollars or two hundred dollars. The check in question was drawn in September 1914, and deposited by Mr. Fogg in the Norway National Bank, in which he kept a deposit and he was given credit for two hundred dollars, the same amount being charged against the deposit of Mrs. Rowe, which at that time amounted to something over that. Mr. Fogg claimed that he cashed the check for two hundred dolars for Mrs Rowe when she paid him a small bill she owed. Mrs. Rowe claimed that the check was for two dollars. The Justice reserved his decision until the October term of court. A. J. Stearns and James S. Wright for Mrs. Rowe, Alton C. Wheeler and Walter Gray for both defendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Newton and five children of Fall River, Mass., who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Farnum, left Monday by the way of White Mountains accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Farnum.

Mrs. Virgil Decoster of Buckfield is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Morton and family.

Seven members of the Universalist choir sang at the Universalist church on Paris Hill, Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence G. Morton and children, Helen and Hugh of Crystal, N. H., visited Mrs. Lucelia C. Morton over Sunday.

Mrs. Albert Lowell and Myrtle L. of Roxbury, Mass., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lowell.

Mrs. Lois Rice of Lynn, Mass., is visiting her brother, William O. Frothingham and family.

Ralph Penfold of Portland has been appointed as a motorcycle policeman on the traffic squad, being the first officer to use a motorcycle. He was confirmed Saturday. Mr. Penfold has been a special policeman in Portland for some time.

Ralph Whitman of Boston, Mrs. E. J. Whitman of Somerville, Mass., and Rev. and Mrs. William Blake of Massachusetts are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stuart at their cottage at Lake Pennesseewassee.

The twin sons, Norman Mason and Herman Hastings, of Mr. and Mrs. Don Bean were christened Sunday morning at 10:30 by Rev. A. T. McWhorter.

News has been received of the death of Mrs. Estella C. Ford at her home in Yarmouth. Mrs. Ford was the daughter of the late Alden Chase of Bryant's Pond and the widow of Rev. Albert A. Ford, who was for some years pastor of the Paris Hill Baptist church. The funeral was held Sunday.

Alton C. Wheeler will preside at the meeting in Lewiston Thursday evening when Theodore Roosevelt speaks there. Mr. Wheeler has spoken in the Republican campaign during the past week at Oakland, Bryant's Pond, and Poland. This week he will speak three times and next week four times in Franklin county in Farmington, Phillips, Rangeley, Strong and other places.

A special train will leave Bethel at 4:45 in the afternoon Thursday to accomodate those who wish to attend the Roosevelt meeting at Lewiston. The train will return after the meeting.

A Republican meeting will be held in Grange Hall, Monday evening at which Raymond Robbins of Chicago will speak. Mr. Robbins was chairman of the Progressive National Convention held at Chicago in June, and is an eloquent speaker of national reputation.

Economy Hints

DON'T eliminate beefsteak from your menu just because you have neither a gas, electric nor coal range. You can fry a steak on that little gas stove you bought for 10 cents if you only know how, and it would take a well qualified expert to tell the difference.

First have your pan red hot and drop in a piece of suet about the size of a hickory nut. Take your steak, a sirloin or porterhouse, at least one and one-half inches thick—two inches thick is better; let it remain three minutes first on one side, then on the other, for searing. This is to keep the juices in. Keep turning the steak constantly at intervals of three to five minutes until done—rare, medium or well—as desired, and the result will be twin brother to a broiled steak.

Another way to fry steak is to sear it three minutes on each side, then place a cover on the pan and let it cook slowly seven minutes more on each side, when it is medium.

Of course there is nothing like broiling for the best flavor, and there is nothing to equal the coal or wood fire for this purpose. The secret is a glowing red heat. The housewife with a wood fire, if she will take the trouble to burn the wood nearly to the center, check the draft until the fire forms charcoal, will be repaid with a dainty morsel.

The average housewife, however, finds the gas oven an ideal instrument for broiling. The oven should be hot when the steak is placed within, so it is well to light the gas in the oven about five minutes before the steak is ready and when the broiler is hot put the steak on it as near the gas flame as possible without letting it touch. Sear on each side from one to two minutes, turning it with a fork inserted as near the edge as possible. When the searing is completed turn the steak again, lower the pan about six inches and turn the burners halfway down so that the steak may broil slowly on each side about five minutes. This will give you a rare steak. It is sometimes well to give the steak a little more time and turn it oftener, never allowing it to broil on one side longer than four or five minutes. When frying a steak in an ordinary pan remember to stick the fork always near the bone in turning. The fried steak requires about twenty minutes.

BRIDE'S SHOWER.

How to Plan an Entertainment In Which Pins Are Used.

The invitations for this unusual shower were written on a correspondence card, on which a little gilt paper heart was pinned. Pins of every description were brought by the guests; there were papers and cubes of pins, pin balls, cushions filled with pins, bar, veil, collar and cuff pins. Safety pins in black and white were there, and papers of gilt and pearl pins for fastening the wedding veil. The following old rime, changed to suit the occasion, was written on the bride's place card:

No needles, but pins,
No needles, but pins,
For when a girl marries
Her happiness begins.

At each plate there was a bouquet of dainty spring flowers, with a fancy pin thrust through the gauze bow that tied them. It is astonishing how many novel and useful pins and receptacles there may be devised for such a shower.

The hostess gave a leather velvet lined scarfpin case, which the little bride to be said she knew "he" would appropriate.

There was a shirt waist set consisting of four little velvet bows, each one attached to a safety pin and all easy to attach to a lace jabot or the front of a shirt waist.

Truth.

In troubled waters you can scarce see your face or see it very little till the water be quiet and stand still. So in troubled times you can see little truth. When times are quiet and settled then truth appears.—Selden.

WEST PARIS.

Lawn Party.

The lawn party under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the M. E. church Friday afternoon and evening was a very successful and happy occasion. The food sold readily as it always does. The evening games on the lawn in front of the church caused much merriment.

Japanese lanterns were strung across in front and two sides of the lawn and looked very pretty. Over a hundred were present and they were divided into four companies for the Olympian games represented England, United States, France and Sweden. A captain was appointed for each group, each of whom chose from his group one or more as the game required to take a contesting part in it. In this way the whole affair was made very social and every one had a chance to take part making it of interest to all because of the feeling that all had a part. The games enjoyed included a hundred yard dash; walking a twine stretched on the ground; shot put; throwing a feather; two hundred yard dash; twenty yard dash; carrying peanuts on a silver knife; broad jump; high jump; handicap; one legged race; hurdle race; relay race; pole vault; 880 yard dash; marathon race.

Rev. L. W. Grundy superintended the games and Mrs. Grundy kept the tally. Sweden won. France and United States were a tie.

West Paris Grange.

At the Grange meeting Saturday afternoon, it was decided to make the usual Grange exhibit at the County Fair and Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Grover and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stevens were appointed as a general committee on arrangements with the authority to appoint any whom they might choose to help them. The program for the afternoon opened with all singing America. A piano duet by Mary Stearns and Edith Stevens. A few remarks were made by R. L. Cummings and then the time was given to Mr. McIntire, the Worthy Master of Oxford Pomona Grange, who spoke upon cooperation and helpful things for the farmer in general, which was very interesting. A solo, A Perfect Day, was sung by Mary Stearns and was enjoyed so much that she was called back and very sweetly sang "Dreaming" accompanied by Madeline Peabody, after which fruit punch and saltines were served by one of the lady officers, assisted by two gentlemen waiters. Not a very large company were out on account of the special town meeting at South Paris, which took away the men for that business, but the women and few men who were present enjoyed the afternoon.

The following committees have been appointed to arrange for the Grange exhibit at the Oxford County Fair:

GETTING SOMEWHERE.

What is it about the autoniobile that lends enchantment to the distance? If anybody knows, it has been kept as a well guarded secret. The average intelligent observer knows only that people who ride in automobiles are always coming from somewhere and going somewhere else. If they stop, it is generally only for a moment. If they stop longer, it is to look at a tire, or a carbureator or to cool an overheated engine. Then they are off again. It doesn't matter where they are going any more than it matters where they came from. They were going to the place they have come from only a few minutes ago; they will be coming from the place they are going to in a few minutes more. The wheels, it appears, must be kept moving. Automobiles are seldom in repose outside of the garage.

Why is it? When the autoists were pedestrians in other and, perhaps, happier days, they occasionally paused in their walks. It was one of the delights of an old-fashioned ramble to regale one's self with the view, to take in the scenery, to contemplate leisurely the landscape. The automobilist has no time to dwell upon vistas or prospects. He must be getting on, and after spending half the time alloted to his trip in the morning or afternoon or evening in getting on, he spends the other half in getting back. That is, what time he is not going he is coming; what time he is not coming he is going. Stopping to look at anything is not in his line.

At the top of a hill, if the road be good, he speeds to the bottom; at the bottom he speeds to the top. All of his landmarks are ahead. The neighborhood through which he speeds simply leads him to the neighborhood toward which he is speeding. He is interested in a given point along the highway so long as it is ahead of him; his interest in it ceases the moment he reaches it. That cluster of houses in the distance means to him that he will reach it in so many throbs of his four, six, eight or twelve-cylinder engine; that its environment is picturesque has nothing to do with the case. Of course there are exceptions. With these we have nothing to do just now. Has it ever been your good fortune to go autoing with a party of exceptions?

No criticism is meant, everybody knows somebody who said, loud enough to be heard across a room, that if he ever owned an automobile he would not let it exceed ten miles an heur, and, moreover, he would pause along the highway and take in every attractive view he came to. Everybody in later experience with this person found that, when out in his automobile, whether driving or directing the driving, he acted as one who had lost completely the ability to look sidewise, and the faculty of concentrating upon anything save something a long distance straight ahead. This may be set down as the rule. In the old days that same man in a buggy, in a carriage or on horseback or out for a stroll, would be constantly looking about him, solicitous lest he should miss something on the way; now, or since he got his motor car, he seems to be in a constant state of anxiety lest somebody may ask him to look to the right or to the left at something past which he is flying.

Will this go on perpetually; or, shall we have a reversion to human instinct among autoists? It is hard to say. The problem, it appears, is one that each man and woman must work out individually. No doubt there are many people, especially invited people, who would rather spend a little time between places than devote a whole excursion to traveling from one place to another. But invited people have to be careful. Guests should not be choosers. People are not invited on automobile trips with the idea that they are to be taken somewhere, but, rather, with the idea that they are to be taken by somewhere. The difference, we are sure, will be noted. Properly speaking, an automobile ride is a whirl. You were there then you were here, now you are everywhere. Then it is time to alight, for you are back before you realize that you have gone. Some other evening you will be called for again when you will be certain not to see a lot of things you have missed seeing this time. All you can do is to thank your hosts. They mean well. They are all hospitable. They are all kind. But if you really want to see some of the beautiful things of earth that automobile parties never see, you will hire a hack, or walk.—Aroostook Times.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it." —Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 525 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a pure remedy containing the extractive properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, meets the needs of woman's system at this critical period of her life. Try it.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from alcohol or any harmful drugs. Try it.

NORTH WATERFORD

Grange Picnic a Big Success.

North Waterford Grange held its annual picnic in Flint Grove in Bisbeetown Aug. 26. Four hundred attended the first great event of the season. 2nd to the "World's Fair" is the crowd that met in this ideal spot. A conspicuous sign pointed the way to this fairyland. A line of beautiful flags crossed the road in front of the grove.

First to be seen as one approached the grounds was the Serving Tent of white with a large flag waving over it, where the food was cut and the coffee made, presided over by Mrs. Howard Allen, Mrs. George Abbott and Mrs. Samuel Lebroke. Flint brothers were busy doing a hundred and one things. They have worked unceasingly in their endeavors to make the picnic a success. That they succeeded beyond all expectations is vouched for by all who attended.

A beautiful little red tent nestled in the small pines for the accomodation of the ladies, for their clothes etc. All necessary toilet articles also were at hand. The grounds were covered by all kinds of devices for the amusement of the company, vaulting bar, merry-go-round, swing, swimming pool, teeters, quoits, etc.

Prompt at noon the dinner was served, a number of the Grange ladies overseeing the work while many of the gentlemen assisted in waiting upon them. The table was bountifully spread with all kinds of tempting viands too numerous to mention. Safe to say, none went away hungry from that plentiful board. Beside the main table there was a nearby waiting table loaded with food. North Waterford Grange women have always been noted for their fine cooking.

Following is the program for the afternoon, Mrs. Lizzie Morse called the company to order:

The Shortest Woman—(wasn't there of course).

Henry Rawson of Mechanic Falls, hardware dealer, furnished fine whistles free for all of the children who were much pleased with them. The sound of them made the woods seem full of birds, their music was fine.

The little white tent with the flag over it and the beautiful red one as seen from the road in the green woods made a lovely picture. The signs were large and handsome. It was a fine day for the occasion and all went home well pleased with their day of pleasure. A goodly sum was realized by the Patrons. Only ten cents apiece was the price for the great amount of pleasure they gave, too. May each year bring another picnic as good as this one.
